2012 MDA model car contest

From the Prez...

Ahoy, mates! Usually I keep my salty language for the "Crow's Nest" article but this Titanic theme has got me excited about things "nautical." Have you got your RMS "Ship of the Line" ready for the ShootOut in July? Putting the finishing touches on a Leo and Kate diorama? Have you rusted out the hull for your underwater wreckage scene? Well, you have about 4 months to get ready.

The convention season is well under way and the 14th of July is right around the corner. Richmond kicked off the season with a bang and a well-attended show (700+ models) in February. MosquitoCon and NOVA are coming up soon. Not to mention the D&J show in Galax and our own D-Day Memorial show on Father's Day weekend. Lots to do and see in the next few months. And lots of work as well. It's that time again. OK, stop groaning, its trophy sponsorship and raffle prize gathering time.

Please bring in those shelf bending items that you know will never get built to the next meeting. You have them as well as do I. Besides, you need to clear space for new stuff. Also, remember, we will be having a huge sale of Tommy Carr's collection at the next meeting. And Cliff will be giving a demo as well. Put down the TV remote and get to a meeting. You can always catch 'Big Bang Theory' in re-runs.

From the Crow's Nest

By Tim Ward

Wow, is it March already? Next thing you know, we will be mowing (or shoveling snow?) This is a weird time of year. You never know whether to put on a coat or flip-flops. Check out a teenager, they may have both on—good grief!

Anyway, we know it's the time of year when models need to be nearing some stage of completion because the RVIPMS bus is idling in the parking lot ready to venture to some convention or road trip. Looks like a new show in Statesville, NC was on the GPS screen for St Patty's Day weekend. Other IPMS shows are just around the corner. (time wise)

Congrats to the RVIPMS mateys who took home hardware from the ODO in Richmond. Well-deserved!

NOVA's contest and the VA ShootOut are followed by the big-daddy, the Nationals. Also remember, a big regional show in Dayton is in April, we may be putting together a trip. This is always a great place to visit, if you haven't seen the USAF Museum, it is worth the trip for that alone. Check with your local "travel agent" for details. Hopefully, gas won't be $10.00 a gallon by then. May have to sail up the Ohio River—I don't think wind is too expensive.

Hero Pilot Dies – Greg Clower

We all know the history of Europe falling under the Nazi jackboot. When Poland fell in 1939, a large contingent of Poles escaped to England via Romania. By 1940 many young pilots of other nationalities, French, Danish, Norwegian, Belgium and Dutch made their way to England.

Tadeusz Sawicz is believed to be the last surviving Polish fighter pilot who fought alongside the English in the Battle of Britain. Sawicz died in Toronto in 2011 at age 97.

After the Nazis took over his homeland in 1939, Sawicz made his way to France, where he fought until Paris fell. He then took up the fight in Britain in July 1940, just as the Luftwaffe began its three month long failed assault on England. Some 17,000 Polish pilots, mechanics, and ground staff fought for Britain, leading Winston Churchill to say of the decisive victory,

"Never in the field of human conflict was so much owed by so many to so few."

Sawicz earned Distinguished Flying Crosses from Poland four times, as well as the American, British, and Dutch equivalent for his service during the war. After Poland was taken over by Soviet-backed communists at the close of World War II, Sawicz moved to Britain. In 1957 he emigrated to Canada. Sawicz earned Poland's highest military honor and was granted the rank of brigadier general in 2006.
